DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE
This small church is designed in the Gothic Revival style. It is built of rusticated stone, and has a steeply pitched roof. It is three bays wide (including the tower), four bays deep, and one and a half stories high. The foundation projects slightly from the facade and sides. Stone steps lead to the steeply pitched, buttressed portico, which is pierced by a large pointed arch that contains the main entrance. The arch is stilted, as the molding around the crown is supported by engaged columns. To the left of the portico is a window set in a pointed arch molding of stone with a stone sill. The window is double hung, with 4/4 lights, and is of the same configuration and size as the four windows on the west side of the church. Above, and slightly to the left of the apex of the portico roof is another window identical in conception to the others, differing only in its dimensions (slightly wider, shorter). On the southeast corner of the building is a truncated tower of two levels. A narrow door occupies the first level of the tower. The molding framing its pointed arch is interrupted by the foundation's stonework. Above the entrance is a lancet window identical to the configuration of the other windows except in dimensions (narrower, shorter). The tower narrows to form a hexagon above this window. A hexagonal base for what must have originally been a steeple (it may have never been built) appears at about the level of the top of the uppermost window of the facade of the building. On the sides of the building, shallow buttresses appear at the corners and between each bay of windows.
